

Public Sector Equality Duty January 2022

1. Introduction and Context

1.1 The Legal Context

The Equality Act 2010 came into effect on 1 October 2010 and brings together, harmonises and extends current equality law. The existing anti-discrimination laws have been consolidated into a single Act, which has been introduced to strengthen the laws preventing discrimination and the inequalities that still exist in society today.

The Equality Act has also created changes to earlier legislation and includes discrimination previously unrecognised in legislation. In essence, it creates a new 'Single Equality Duty' on public bodies to tackle discrimination, promote equality of opportunity and encourage good community relations.

The term protected characteristics has replaced equality strands for describing the protected traits held by groups or individuals under anti-discrimination and equality legislation. The earlier separate duties for disability, gender and race have been replaced with a single, more effective framework and the new 'Single Equality Duty' covers:

- Age
- Disability
- Gender Reassignment
- Marriage and Civil Partnership
- Pregnancy and Maternity
- Race
- Religion or Belief
- Sex
- Sexual Orientation

1.2 The Purpose of Equality Information and the Public Sector Equality Duty

The Council has a legal requirement to have due regard to the aims of the general equality duty and must understand the impact of its policies and practices on people with protected characteristics. Collecting and analysing equality information is an important way for the Council to develop this understanding.

The Council must publish information to demonstrate its compliance with the general equality duty and this must be done annually by 31st January. This is the seventh edition of the requirement to publish equality information.

The document published must include information relating to people who share a relevant protected characteristic who are employees of the Council and are people who are affected by Council policies and practices (e.g. service users and customers).
