

How can self build benefit my community?

Self-build and custom house building is a flexible model that can enable average households to meet their own housing needs. This model can deliver housing at a price cheaper than market homes for individuals or groups.

The NaCSBA is the national support organisation for residents and groups who wish to consider meeting their housing need through the custom or self build housing model.

The association's focus is on increasing the number of homes delivered using this model, with guidance, support and technical information readily available through their website and road shows.

Custom and self-build housing can be cheaper than purchasing off the open market and may be suitable for households who are unable to compete on the open market but are not eligible for social housing.
